IPA News

We are pressing the alternative to urine drug testing issue in the workplace, and should know more about what is happening with the proposed oral drug testing regulations after the Drug Testing and Advisory Board (DTAB) meeting this month. We have also begun writing our congressmen, and hope to get some responses soon.

Dr. Soifer traveled to India last week to lead the first workshop there in Mumbai. You can read about his experience here on the IPA Talk Forum. Although the workshop was small, we're hoping it's the start of something that will grow in Asia. Visit the Paruresis Association of India website here.

Several other projects, including educating urologists about our issue, will hopefully begin in the Summer. We need to lay the groundwork for this project, and also several others. Time is an issue, so we will start them as soon as we can.

Paruresis in the News

Dear Deidre from The Sun - U.K.
SHY BLADDER WOES: I'm terrified of doing my work's drugs test as I struggle to pee-on-demand.

DEAR DEIDRE: MY new company will demand I take a drugs test, but I'd struggle to produce a urine sample on demand. I've always been the same. I can't go to the loo if there's another guy in the gents. I have nothing to hide at all by doing the drugs test but I can't pee in the company of other people I'm 30 and I've finally got my HGV licence and a job I've wanted ever since I was a boy. I have nothing to hide at all but if I can't do the test, how can I keep my job? Read Deidre's response here!

You're Not Alone

Coming Up with a Plan for Gradual Exposure ~ by thimblin
I've had paruresis for pretty much as long as I can remember. In high school I would never use the bathroom and hold it in until I got home. At college I would either manage to find an empty bathroom in the school or go to a restaurant that I knew had a private bathroom. These tactics helped me make it through the average day without the discomfort of a full bladder, but I would never be able to travel anywhere without anxiety over not being able to empty out my bladder. I REALLY dislike the feeling... Read the rest here!
